

Witness protection

APRIL 2021

Annie was the trophy wife of a Mexican-American drug lord. She knew her husband was a criminal but loved the luxurious life she could enjoy being at his side. She wasn't directly involved in any illegal activities but she was well aware of what was going on with drug trafficking, prostitution rackets and so on. She had even met some young girls who were promised a modelling career and ended up in prostitution instead. She told them that if they managed to get themselves a rich husband like she did all their problems would be solved.

When the FBI connected her telling her that her husband was going to be prosecuted and that she was given a chance to become a so-called collaborator of justice, which meant helping the police to collect information on her husband in exchange for keeping her record clean. She would also be helped with a special witness protection programme in case her husband's criminal network tries to get back at her.

Annie felt very conflicted between loyalty to her husband, whom she knew was a criminal, and the chance to get away with the justice.

WITNESS PROTECTION

In the end, she went for the second option and decided to collaborate with the FBI. After she gave them all the information they needed, they told her when they would storm in her husband's villa in Florida and made sure to leave the mansion with an excuse by that time.

The FBI told her to change her hair color as soon as she could to be less recognisable so she went to a hairdresser to get a hair dye for the time being. Checking herself in the mirror, she noticed how she looked quite different as a redhead. She had always been proud of her gorgeous blonde mane so seeing it replaced by a red one felt very confusing to her.

She was also told to wear the outfit she would find in a box at the closest post office which would make her look even less recognisable for the time being. She found a pair of glasses and a French style hat. She changed outfit and checked herself in the mirror. She could pass for a French tourist now probably.

WITNESS PROTECTION

Heading to the location where FBI agents would pick her up to transfer her to a safe location she couldn't think about the life she was leaving behind her. Gone was the luxury lifestyle and her powerful husbands, who would always be able to protect her.

Now she would be on her own, nearly broke as her macho husband didn't allow her to even have a bank account as he was taking care of her needs anyway, and with a brand new life in front of her. She had her beauty and charme of course so she'd be able to get herself a good life again soon. Hopefully the witness protection program wouldn't interfere with her plans, she told herself.

WITNESS PROTECTION

As soon as they escorted her to a safe location she could take off her disguise and switch to a more regular outfit. The hair dye instead seemed to be pretty deep, she noticed, so she planned to do something about that, maybe dying her hair back to blonde. The FBI agent in charge of guiding her through the witness protection programme, a young Black man named Roy, heard about that and immediately stopped her.

"You aren't doing anything to your hair without our permission."

"Excuse me? It's my hair!"

"Your appearance will be modified according to our guidelines to minimise the chance of being recognized. You're a top tier witness for a major operation against drug trafficking so we can't risk losing you, I'm sorry but we'll have to do anything we can to protect you."

"What... What do you have in mind then?"

"I was planning to break the news a little later but here we are... You are going to undergo a ethnic reassignment surgery to change your appearance in a way nobody would think possible."

Annie freaked out "Ethnic reassignment surgery? What is that supposed to mean?"

What ethnicity is she turned into?

A. African-American

B. Asian

C. Latina

D. Arab

E. Mixed